

Reassure students that their future is bright!

December 1 is #GivingTuesday, and we ask you to join the global philanthropic movement as a member of the WashU community.

Our faculty, staff, and students have continued to carry out the university's mission in this year of uncertainty. While their commitment to education, research, and clinical care is unwavering, their needs are great. You can support them by making a gift to a specific school, program, or scholarship, or you can address students' most urgent needs by contributing to the WashU Crisis Response Fund. No matter which area you choose, your gift will go to work immediately to help provide stability and hope to those creating a better future for all of us.

To encourage you to participate, John Altmix, BS '94, BS '94, MBA '94, and Diane Altmix, MBA '93, are kicking off #GivingTuesday with a $125,000 gift for scholarships, challenging 1,000 of their fellow alumni and WashU supporters to join them in giving.

Help us reach our goal and make an invaluable WashU education possible for more students!
